

Music therapy is becoming recognized as an important method of establishing communication with the disabled, both adults and children, and is taught at Capilano College. Here Cordy Spanier and Alice Nott try their hands on the ukelele during a music therapy session at the college. See story page 3.