About our Instructors

Coat Cooke is a multi-instrumental composer & instructor, who has been teaching private music lessons in Vancouver for over twenty years. He is co-artistic director of the New Orchestra Workshop Society and founder of the prestigious NOW Orchestra. With his own ensembles, Coat has toured Canada and the USA and has produced records on Canadian, European and American record labels.

Coat will give instruction on saxophone, flute, clarinet and guitar for students age 10 and up, at all levels from beginner to advanced.

Gabriole Sinclair has been teaching piano and theory professionally for many years. She is a graduate of the Royal Conservatory of Music and holds a diploma in Jazz Studies. She teaches all levels of music making - beginner to advanced.

Lessons are tailored to the abilities and goals of each individual student. Students may play for pleasure, prepare for RCM exams and perform at recitals and music festivals. She accepts students from 5yrs to adult. All are welcome and will benefit in many ways from the study of music.

Lindsay MacDonald has taught piano and theory for 22 years. Her students have consistently done extremely well in Royal Conservatory exams and competitions. Her students get the opportunity to perform in recitals at least twice a year, and are encouraged to play the music they enjoy most.

Lindsay has performed in orchestras and rock bands, and currently appears frequently in a 1920's dance band. She composes and arranges music for theatre, dance and concert stage, and conducts and musically directs. Her music has been performed across Canada, Britain and in Thailand.

Lindsay has a bachelor of music degree from U.B.C., a Jazz and Commercial Music diploma from V.C.C., and a A.R.C.T. in piano performance from the Royal Conservatory of Toronto. She is also a member of the B.C.M.T.A. (British Columbia Registered Music Teachers Association).
